5

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a method and apparatus for learning content creation and reutilization with customizable learning object subsets. It is usable in a basic Internet browsing paradigm to successfully gather and distribute The present invention intellectual material and products. determines the appropriate placement and meaning of intellectual content as a component of a paradigm-based learning matrix. The content is sorted into a cluster from a structured collection of These clusters are then stored and four learning objects. retrieved dynamically, based on content expert determination or The method and system can build a personalized user need. learning preference by noting a pattern creativity of the same user employing the system over a period of time.